

Your support can make the difference in a gifted child's life.

KAGE Foundation

Some children don't want toys or expensive electronic gadgets. What they want is an opportunity to spend time with their intellectual peers and to find a place where their uniqueness as a gifted individual is accepted and appreciated. It's an opportunity that could easily be missed because of a family's limited financial resources.

The Kentucky Association for Gifted Education's (KAGE) Foundation makes possible financial awards that allow gifted young people from across Kentucky to attend summer programs that are designed especially for them at Kentucky's public universities. There, gifted students find new friends who think as they do and challenging curricula to feed their intellectual needs.

During this time of giving, please consider gifting a child with a present that lasts a lifetime - the opportunity to be intellectually challenged and to develop lasting friendships. The KAGE Foundation depends on your assistance and generosity. Without the support of donors like you, these needs and dreams of gifted children would likely go unmet.

The KAGE Foundation tries to stretch the financial assistance available to as many children as possible. However, because of limited funds, some children must be turned away. As an advocate for gifted and talented children, please consider how your financial support can make a difference.

The Foundation relies on individual donations and gifts from businesses. The Kentucky Savings Plan Trust is a generous benefactor but additional donations are needed.

Please consider making a donation that will change the life of a gifted young person.

Together, we can make a difference in the future.
